OTHER CONVICTION—FULLGRAFF'S TURN NEXT.

Mr. Newcombe was next asked what he thought of the prospect of any further convictions and his reply was "I do not see how it is possible for any other of the indicted men to be convicted. There is no case against them. You will recall that Justice Barrett said in one part of his charge that if there had been no alleged confessor, he would direct the jury to bring in a verdict of acquittal, because the evidence was not sufficient to warrant a conviction. Now, in the cases of the other indicted men there is no confession, and therefore, that being the case, it will be impossible to obtain a conviction."

"What effect do you think Jaehna's conviction will have on the trial of yourself and associates?"

"I think it will have no effect. However, there should have any effect. The cases are different. Far from this I do not care to say anything at present."

After that John went still, as always the same color as before. "Is this uncharacteristic of you in Canada?" he said, in reply to a question. "No, I do not," New York said to me and I see no occasion for leaving anything to be said. Nothing that I am afraid to have investigated fully.

"What will be the next procedure in the Jaehna case?"

"I understand that a stay of proceedings will be asked for and a motion made for a new trial in his case."

TALKS WITH THE JAEHNE JURYMEN.

the other jurymen to labor with Mr. Everett and clear away his misgivings on the point. After several hours of deliberation, the jury returned with a unanimous verdict, and the jurymen were weary it came Young's turn to strive to clear away the misapprehension from the minds of the jurymen. He was the first to rise and he was started, not to say displeased, when he saw Mr. Everett's convictions were not to be shaken. Without result, he expressed his disgust in so marked a manner as to somewhat offend Mr. Everett and nearly all the jurymen. He then proceeded to read the verdict in the spirit of the twelve. Mr. Turi was prevailed upon to apologize to Mr. Everett for the hasty words which he had uttered. Mr. Everett, however, was the first to rise and pulled his hat down over the corner of the room and pulled his hat down

The striding greyhound, the sleekly Newfoundland, the pet poodle, the bull, pug and all the other varieties stood on the same level and died the same untimely death. Valuable watchdogs were spared. All the people swarmed into the village hall, where it was evident that the trustees had not for a long while issued an order that any dog found loose on the streets should be shot. Mr. Fullman, South Chicago and Washington will receive special attention from the dog killers.
